

Press release

Charity Commission investigates Jehovah's Witnesses charities

From:

The Charity Commission

First published:

10 June 2014

Part of:

Statements on live cases: Charity Commission and Community and society

Statutory inquiries opened into Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Britain and Manchester New Moston Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses

The Charity Commission, the regulator of charities in England and Wales, has opened statutory inquiries into Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Britain (registered charity number 1077961), and one of the congregations, Manchester New Moston Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses (registered charity number 1065201).

The investigation into Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Britain is to examine:

- the charity's handling of safeguarding matters, including the creation, development, substance and implementation of its safeguarding policy
- the administration, governance and management of the charity by the trustees and whether or not the trustees of the charity have complied with and fulfilled their duties and responsibilities as trustees under charity law
- the charity's safeguarding advice provided to congregation charities

The regulator opened a case into the charity in July 2013 to examine concerns about the trustees' approach to dealing with safeguarding matters and discuss the scope of the trustees' duties and responsibilities under charity law in connection with safeguarding issues. The Commission has corresponded with the charity and met with its trustees in March 2014.

The charity has a safeguarding policy and the trustees agree that the charity, and the congregations, should have adequate safeguarding policies and procedures in place. The inquiry is about the regulator assuring itself about the policy, procedures and practices in light of recent events.

The Commission's duty to protect public trust in charity has prompted it to open a formal inquiry to investigate these concerns. The Commission's concerns have been amplified by recent criminal cases concerning historic incidents of abuse involving individuals who appear to have been connected to Jehovah's Witnesses congregations and/or the charity. In addition, there has been growing public interest in how the charity and congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses deal with safeguarding matters.

The investigation into the Manchester New Moston Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses is to examine:

- the charity's handling of safeguarding matters, including its safeguarding policy, procedures and practice
- how the charity dealt with the risks to the charity and its beneficiaries, including the application of safeguarding policy and procedures and any related policies and procedures particularly as regards the conviction and release of a former trustee
- the administration, governance and management of the charity by the trustees and whether or not the trustees of the charity have complied with and fulfilled their duties and responsibilities as trustees under charity law

The Commission has serious concerns about Manchester New Moston Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, having most recently opened a case into it in December 2013. There has also been recent press coverage in connection with the conviction and release of a former trustee of the charity.

The two investigations announced today are separate but linked.

Trustees are under a duty to act prudently and all times to act exclusively in the best interests of the charity and to discharge their duties in accordance with their duty of care. In consequence it is essential that charities engaged with children or vulnerable people (a) have adequate safeguarding policies and procedures which reflect both the law and best practice in this area, (b) ensure that trustees know what their responsibilities are and (c) ensure that these policies are fully implemented.

The Commission stresses that it is not a safeguarding authority and its inquiries will not investigate allegations of abuse or actual incidents of abuse, whether historic or recent. Its concern is with the proper regulation of charities. Anyone with concerns about specific incidents of alleged abuses, whether historic or recent, for any charity, should report their concerns to the police and the relevant safeguarding authorities.

The trustees of each of the charities have indicated to the Commission that they intend to challenge the regulator's decisions to open the statutory inquiries in the First-tier Tribunal (Charity).

Ends

PR 48/14

For press enquiries contact the press office

Notes to Editors

1. The Charity Commission is the independent regulator of charities in England and Wales.
2. Our mission is to be the independent registrar and regulator of charities in England and Wales, acting in the public's interest, to ensure that charities know what they have to do; the public know what charities do and charities are held to account.
3. Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Britain is the national governing body for all the Jehovah's Witnesses Congregations. There are 1354 individual congregations registered as charities.
4. The inquiry into Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Britain was opened on 27 May 2014.
5. The inquiry into Manchester New Moston Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses was opened on 30 May 2014.
6. Statutory inquiries are the Commission's most serious type of engagement with charities; the opening of an inquiry gives the Commission access to a range of protective and remedial powers.
7. It is the Commission's policy, after it has concluded the inquiry, to publish a report detailing what issues the inquiry looked at, what actions were undertaken as part of the inquiry and what the outcomes were. Reports of previous inquiries by the Commission are available on its website.